Reflection for the First Sunday of Lent (Year B)

He will never leave us alone

On this First Sunday of Lent, our liturgical attention is already directed to the temptations of Christ. As he overcame temptations, he as well gives us grace through the sacraments, the celebration of God's covenant, to also become victorious over the difficulties we face in our lives.

God saves through his Church: When God wanted to save the world, he raised up Noah and instructed him to build an ark. Here, Noah becomes a symbol of Jesus whom God sent to save the world. Just as Noah built an ark to save the world, Jesus also founded his Church (Mt 16:18) to become the means of salvation for everyone. However, the ark built by Noah could only save a few people but the Church, the new ark of God, has become the haven for all peoples of the world. This Church of Christ does not only include all people. but it is also a lasting and sure seed of unity, hope and salvation for the whole human race (Vatican II, Lumen Gentium, n. 9). Thus, God has made a covenant with every living creature on earth because he desires the salvation of all (1 Tim 2:4). At the time of Noah, water destroyed many people. In the Church of Christ, the waters of baptism have now become the means through which we are saved (Mk 16:16). During this season of Lent, the Church invites us to recall our baptism through which God has given us eternal life.

God has made a covenant with us through Christ: The First Reading repeatedly speaks of the covenant God has made with the whole human race. At the time of Noah, the rainbow was given as the sign of this covenant. In the new covenant which God has made with us in Christ, the Precious Blood of his Son has become the everlasting sign of this covenant (Mt 26:28). God made a covenant with the people of Israel, yet he spoke through the Prophet Jeremiah that he would make a new covenant with his people (Jer 31:31-33). The new covenant was made when he offered his Son as the sacrifice for our sins through his Blood (Rom 5:9; Eph 1:7). Thus, each time we celebrate the Eucharist, we are reminded of God's covenant with the whole world.

Christ was tempted to strengthen us: At the beginning of his public ministry, Jesus was in the wilderness where he was tempted. Christ's temptation in the wilderness speaks of the cross we carry. As he was tempted alone in the wilderness, we also remember the many times we have felt alone in our trials. That Christ himself was tempted alone in the wilderness once again assures us that we are not alone in our troubles. As angels were there to minister to him, he will always send his help from above to restore our hope in him. Also, the temptation of Christ reminds us of his humanity in which he died in order to save us. Through Christ's death, God has made a covenant with us that he will give us the graces we need to face the difficulties of life. He will never leave us alone. May we always find strength in our weakness to trust in God's providence. Amen.
